Here's a helpful hint:

The vowels in Japanese are pronounced just like in Spanish. Generally speaking the emphasis on Japanese is usually place on the second syllable not the first.

Hi Paul,

If I am correct, as an example,

Judo is juDO,

Hajime is haJIme

Tomoenage is toMOenage

Uki waza is uKI waza.

The caps are where I assume the emphasis is placed, I will have to find a way to link this page to your recorded pronunciations as that would clarify what you are saying

Chui is no longer used as it has been replaced with a generic "Shido" to cover all penalties except Hansaku Make
